

Adam Sichol

Co-Founder & CEO
Longfellow Real Estate Partners

Adam is Co-Founder and CEO of Longfellow Real Estate Partners responsible for directing Longfellow's overall strategic direction and its continued portfolio expansion. Since co-founding Longfellow in 2009, he has been responsible for growing the company through the execution of value-add and development life science projects in excess of 6,500,000 SF for institutional and commercial tenants. Under Adam's leadership, Longfellow has invested more than $2.6 billion on behalf of institutional investors. In addition, Adam has played an active role in the leasing activities of the firm, including work with companies ranging from newly-formed VC portfolio companies to major pharmaceutical companies and collaborations with academic institutions. Adam is a member of Longfellow's investment committee.

Prior to forming Longfellow, Adam held positions with the following organizations: Higgins Development Partners, Lyme Properties, and Jones Lang LaSalle. Adam received his MBA from the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth and an AB from Hamilton College where he was a member of the men's varsity golf team. Adam is a member of ULI and NAIOP and speaks at various industry events related to life science and technology real estate projects. Outside of Longfellow, Adam enjoys spending time with his wife Lowey and three children; playing golf, hiking and traveling with his family.